

MY ETHICS CODE

I am a journalist who prioritizes ethics and conscience in my work.

My main tenets are honesty, empathy, effective communication and creativity.

Below you will find a short description of each, including my personal connections.

HONESTY

Something my parents instilled in me early on in life, honesty is a value that holds a lot of meaning for me. Not only because I believe it is the backbone of journalism, but because I believe the world is a better place when we speak our truths.

EMPATHY

Growing up as an only child, a lesson I quickly learned was how to be empathetic and form meaningful connections with others. This lesson has translated into my adult life and career in that I truly listen to those I interview for stories, and I do my best to fully capture their essence with my words.

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

As an avid talker from a young age, I have always felt as though I am skilled with communicating. Whether verbal or written, I ensure that my point(s) come across well and there is no room for ambiguity. I choose my words carefully and meticulously in order to achieve the utmost effectiveness and clarity.

CREATIVITY

As can be seen with both this document and my resume, I prefer visually appealing displays to the normal black and white. I always try to incorporate elements of design in my journalistic works in order to pique and maintain reader interest.
